3. Read the following paragraph carefully and answer the questions given below it. (10)

The first thing which a scholar should bear in mind is that a book ought not to be read for mere amusement. Half educated persons read for amusement and are not to be blamed for it; they are incapable of appreciating the deeper qualities that belong to a really great literature. But a young man who has passed through a course of University training should discipline himself at an early day never to read for mere amusement. At once the habit of discipline has been formed, he will find it impossible to read for mere amusement. He will then impatiently throw down any book from which he cannot obtain intellectual food, any book which does not make an appeal to the right emotions and to his intellect.

- Socrates the great Greek philosopher tried hard to control himself and resolved never to make a show of his temper. He believed that an angry man was more of a beast than a human-being. He had a wife who used to lose her temper on the slightest excuse and tried her utmost to irritate the cool and calm philosopher. One day the woman became more furious than ever and began to insult Socrates. Socrates determined not to be put out and to leave her alone, so he went out and sat on the door-step of the house, looking out on the public street. The wife, finding that Socrates was not paying the least heed to her long and angry scolding, went up to him and emptied a pot full of water over him. The passers-by in the street were much amused at the incident, and laughed at it. Socrates joined them in their laughter and quietly remarked, "I was expecting this – after thunder comes the rain."
